Solae' Grant never asked for anything more than a good life as a good wife. That is until, she stumbled upon the naked truth. She can't remember the last time she felt loved. Marriage has a cruel way of reminding you that just when you think you've fallen outta love you fall in love all over again. For some, perhaps. Love is about keeping someone close. Not leaving them to question, who can I run to? She longs for a one-woman-man if such a man exist. Chanel Rodriquez an opportunist from Jacksonville, Florida does not wish to sleep for fear of a reoccurring nightmare. They frighten her so much she can't decipher if it's all in her mind or is it as real as the here and now. Richmond Virginia, the Dirty Dirty is her new home. Chanel has started building from the dirt up promising her partner a 50/50 split. Risky business ventures with ulterior motives of getting paid, undermining, and paper trails breed greed. Lies are spreading like a cancer within this spent tale. This debut release chronicles a chancy love triangle, greed, and will bait my readers with a foretaste into what may happen when a person is forced to ask Who Can I Run To?
